AWARD WINNING BOOK: Axiom Business Book Awards 2015 "Inspired, generous and filled to the brim with action--your action. Go!" - Seth Godin, Author, The Icarus Deception "WARNING: This book will radically transform your thinking." - Matt R Johnson, Director of Cyber Security for a major global financial institution, London, UK "This is a great book! Jen is a personal trainer for your brain - and we all need that." - Andrew Griffiths, Australia's #1 Small Business and Entrepreneurial Author "Five out of five! A highly enjoyable and beautifully illustrated book." - Dr Nik Whitehead, Lecturer, University of Wales: Trinity St David, UK There is no currency in circulation today that wasn't first birthed by an IDEA. What would just one brilliant and original idea be worth to you in your lifetime? How about a dozen? Ideation expert Jen Fraser reveals a range of innovative and exciting new ways to solve problems and come up with incredible ideas - helping you to change your life forever and make a real impact on the world. Take for example, the gaping chasm between what we believe to be impossible, and what can actually be achieved. In 2012, the aviation industry globally was estimated to be worth more than $700 billion. That's not a bad result for an industry based on an idea which was once known to be utterly impossible: human flight. Not since Napoleon Hill's masterpiece 'Think and Grow Rich' has there been a book as game-changing and so easy to understand, yet filled to bursting with inspirational stories, effective techniques, tips and tricks to expand your imagination and bring better quality ideas to life.

This publication is a concise and current resource about how to assess in the vocational education and training sector

This book provides a step-by-step guide to teaching computing at secondary level. It offers an entire framework for planning and delivering the curriculum and shows you how to create a supportive environment for students in which all can enjoy computing. The focus throughout is on giving students the opportunity to think, program, build and create with confidence and imagination, transforming them from users to creators of technology. In each chapter, detailed research and teaching theory is combined with resources to aid the practitioner, including case studies, planning templates and schemes of work that can be easily adapted. The book is split into three key parts: planning, delivery, and leadership and management, and covers topics such as: curriculum and assessment design lesson planning cognitive science behind learning computing pedagogy and instructional principles mastery learning in computing how to develop students' computational thinking supporting students with special educational needs and disabilities encouraging more girls to study computing actions, habits and routines of effective computing teachers behaviour management and developing a strong classroom culture how to support and lead members of your team. Teaching Computing in Secondary Schools is essential reading for trainee and practising teachers, and will prove to be an invaluable resource in helping teaching professionals ensure that students acquire a wide range of computing skills which will support them in whatever career they choose.

On 28 November 2018, the Prime Minister announced an independent review of Australia's vocational education and training (VET) sector to examine ways to deliver skilled workers for a stronger economy. The review was led by the Honourable Steven Joyce, a former New Zealand Minister for Tertiary Education, Skills and Employment. Mr Joyce delivered the final report to the Government in March 2019.

This unit describes the skills and knowledge required for a worker to participate in safe work practices to ensure their own health and safety, and that of others in work environments that involve caring directly for clients. It has a focus on maintaining safety of the worker, the people being supported and other community members.

This collection of duck activities has a strong fun element, however, we do not want it to sound like it is all just fun. There is, in fact, a wealth of solid theory that forms the basis of why we developed this stream of uses for six bricks in business and learning environments. The idea of using playful methods for a range of purposes to generate innovative thinking is not new. For centuries, people have used artifacts like totems and puppets to tell stories and share information, beliefs, and knowledge. We also know that many facilitators and trainers are using tools such as design thinking and agile methodologies where prototyping and games play an important role in the processes of thinking and creating. Whatever your goal, using 3D models is a great facilitation tool. It allows you to lead people through a process where they are able to examine their inside world and relate these lessons to their work environment. These insights then lead to opportunities for further exploration and discovery and ultimately, more productive and effective communication.

This unit describes the skills and knowledge required to work positively with the carers and families of people using the service based on an understanding of their support needs.

The late Dr. Donald E. Carline taught at the University of ColoradoBoulder, where he imparted timeless wisdom unto his students focusing on K-12 education. He emphasized five types of learning: sensory experience learning, memory, motor learning, problem solving/critical thinking, and social-emotional learning. In Five Types of Learning, one of Carlines former studentsCarole Bogue, Ph.D.presents the philosophy and thinking behind each type of learning, drawing on Carlines material and lectures that he delivered in a wonderful, storytelling manner. Bogue also reveiws the recent literature in the five areas of learning and how to facilitate them. She finds significant support for Carlines viewpoints and suggests effective strategies conducive to student learning in light of recent research. In addition to Timeless Wisdom sections in which she presents Carlines description of each type of learning, she includes application exercises drawn from her mentors material. Throughout the book, readers will find thought-provoking questions and discussion items designed to generate deliberation about the types of learning. Whether youre a college instructor, aspiring teacher, practicing teacher, school administrator or parent, youll find guidance to help students succeed in this book.
